The pale moon now reflects her light,
While half the world's asleep,
The stars so beautiful and bright
Look's down upon the deep
The murmuring waves come to the shore
And go in playful glee,
To sing a dirge upon the deep
Of the lone grave by the sea,
While I am left alone to weep
O'er the lone grave by the sea.

The flowers that Mother planted there,
Are fading fast away,
They ne'er again will bloom so fair,
The cottage will decay,
But let that cottage be my home
No other give to me,
For I can watch by day and night
The lone grave by the sea,
And when I die oh! let me lie,
Near the lone grave by the sea.
